Tank water quality concerns?

* Save $$hundreds ****

To the householder

Are you concerned about the quality of your drinking water?

Without treatment most tank water supplies do not meet New Zealand's drinking water standards.

Tank water tastes great and typically doesn't have any chemicals in it but every tank has its own resident population of bacteria which can cause upset tummies, severe illness and even death in extreme cases.

There is a reliable non chemical method of killing these organisms - ultraviolet light.

Our wide range of STERIFLO Ultraviolet sterilisers, which we make in NZ, are used throughout the country in towns, breweries, food and pharmaceutical manufacturing. The reason: because UV is an effective proven treatment method that uses no chemicals.

By using a STERIFLO UV system in conjunction with fine filtration you can ensure that the water supply to your family or business is safe to drink.

Contamination Control's special offer is a treatment system for the whole house water supply consisting of:

as a prefilter a FILTERPURE W10 Jumbo housing and a 1PS10J cartridge;
followed by a Steriflo 800S UV system.

As a special offer we are making this system available at a discounted price, saving over $200 when compared to the usual price of the filter and UV system purchased as components.

The Steriflo 800S uses only 50 Watts of electricity and will treat flows of up to 40 Litres/minute, enough for all but the largest house. Larger models are available with even bigger savings.
